TO MARY.

I love you—'tie the simplest way.
The thing I feel to tell;
Yet if I told it all the day.
You'd never green how well.
You are my comfort and my light—My very life you seem;
I think of you all day; all night,
Tie but of you I dream.

There's pleasure in the lightest word That you can speek to me.
My soul is like the molian's chord,
And vibrates still to thee.

But in my own heart I have met Bome hinder thought for you.

I bless the shadows of your face, The light open your hair --The possing changes there; I love to hear your voice's tone.
Although you need not say A single word to dream upon

th! you are kindly as the beam That warms a here'er it plays,
And you are gentle as a dream
Of happy future days—
And you are strong to do the right,
And swift the wrong to fire—
And if you were not half so bright,
You're all the world to me.

13 Harper's New Monthly Maga zine for August is very attractive, and sustains all the promise of its predecessors. Among the com-calities is a seasonable thing after this wise: a newly imported John Buil, with his face and hands awfully bitten and swellen, appears in the drawing room after his first night ashore, and two young ladies meet him with uplifted bands and serious amazement. John is thus delivered on the " Musquito Question:"

Young Ladies (both at once.) Why Mr. Bull! how terribly you have been bitten by the Musquitoes!

MR. BULL (a fresh importation.) can't hunderstand 'ow it 'appened, I did hevery thing I could think of to keep them hoff. I 'ad my window hopen and a light burning hall night in my hapartment!

We heard from a Sunday school teacher just now an illustration of one kind of "christian forgiveness." Improving upon the day's lesson, the teacher asked a boy whether, "in view" of what he had been studying and repeating, he could forgive those who had wronged him. " Could you," said the teacher, "torgive a boy, for example, who had struck or insulted you?"-"Ye-e-s sir," replied the boy very slowly, "1-guess-1-could;" but he added, in a much more rapid manner, " I could if he was bigger than I am !" Isn't there something of " grown experience" in that? - Knickerbocker.

OUT AT HEART.

BY ELLEN ASSITON

'Why so sad, Ernest?' said the young wife to ber husband, affectionatey twining her arms around his neck and kissing him. He looked up with a sad smile, and replied: 'I am almost out of heart, Mary : 1 think of all pursuits, a profession is the worst. Here have I been, week after week and months-I may soon ray year after year-waiting for practice, yet without success. A lawyer may volunteer in a celebrated case, and so may make himself; but a physician must sit patiently in his office, and if unknown, see men without half his acquirements rolling in wealth, while he perhaps, is

'And now every cost of our little fortune is expended, and our credit will soon be gone when it is found we do not pay. What then is to become of us? Oh! you are too kind! But it Ernest was in a mood which the most sanguine semetimes experience, when disappointment after disappointment has crushed the spirit, and the voice of hope is heard no longer within. His wife would have given way to tears, if she had been alone; but she felt the ne-cessity of sustaining him, and answered

'What if every cent is gone? Have no fear that we shall starve. God sent ravers to feed Elijah, and he will jet interpose for our aid. Trust in him.

But really. Many, this want of success would try the stoutest spirit. The mechanic the day laborer, the humble is sure of his food and raiment; but I having spent years in study have wasted years, besides waiting years for practice, and now when all my fortune is gone, I lose all I have spent, both of time and money, and must forever abandon the idea of my profession. It is too hard !"

More than once, therefore, Ernest would have abandoned the field in despair, but his young wife cheered and encouraged him; though sometimes her own heart felt ready to give up.

Hitherto, the time, talents and conversation of Miss Lind have been much monopolized by the good the great and the noble of the land, that a small mortal like myself could not so much as see the hem of her gazagat.
